Unlimited DSL

Frequently Asked Questions

Unlimited DSL is designed for residential customers wanting to browse the web and check email, typical questions maybe:

Is it really "unlimited" ?

Yes, there is no limit to the amount you can upload or download within a month.

So what is the catch?

Whilst there is no limit to the amount of data, we do manage the traffic so that single users don't negatively effect the performance of other users on the system.

This means that we will " de-prioritize " traffic in excess of 500MB in any 60 minute period. Should you use >500MB in any 60 minute period, we will mark your data as "expendable " for upto 6 hours and therefore some data will most likely not get through.

Most users never even get close to 500MB in 60 minutes doing normal things over the internet.

What can I use Unlimited DSL for?

Basically any "standard" web based service is supported on these plans including email, web browsing, Voice over IP, Skype, Video streaming (eg YouTube etc) and Gaming using known protocols (eg Xbox Live, Wii Connect, PC Games etc).

So what cant I use it for?

This service is not suitable for anyone wanting a "static IP address ", using VPNs, Peer to Peer or other files sharing applications.

If Unlimited is not suited to you, we also have 200GB plans with no traffic management for $99.
